

Manik Khan is the youngest son of the late maestro, Ustad Ali Akbar Khan. He began his training on the sarod with his father at the age of 13. He is currently teaching, performing and working to preserve his family's legacy – helping to keep this tradition of India's rich cultural history alive and flourishing.

Alongside a solo concert career, he has worked with various ensembles to present his father's music in a way that has seldom been heard before. This includes working with local high schools to bring Indian Classical Music to their youth orchestras, and performing with the conductor Michael Morgan and the Fremont Symphony Orchestra to present a 'West Meets East' collaboration.

He resides in the San Francisco Bay Area, where he continues his musical studies with his elder brother, Alam Khan.
